Programme overview

Community cohesion

This practical workshop supports schools with meeting the new duty to promote community cohesion.

Measuring the impact of your service

We all need to look at increasing the effectiveness of the services we offer. This course provides ideas and tried and tested methods to see how to focus on increasing the impact you have.

Improving services through the third sector

This course looks at how community and voluntary organisations can help to provide a greater variety of services, meeting the needs of more people.

Sustainable schools

This workshop looks at how to make the most of opportunities for a long-term sustainable future that considers all resources.

Marketing your services

Promoting your services to your community members and generating opportunities for new services through the use of promotional tools.

School-based commissioning

Getting ready for the potential and the reality in a practical one-day workshop bringing good practice and helpful tips and ideas

Breakfast club training

Thinking of setting up a breakfast club? This course provides an overview of the practical considerations and the motivation to plan for success.

Working with governors and councillors

Looking at the most effective way of engaging with councillors and elected members can help you share commitment and develop the services that are of high importance to those making policy decisions and delivering local services.

Developing a learning organisation

A course that looks at the commitment needed to run a learning organisation that uses the skills of its staff and prepares the organisation for the long term.

Study support and extended schools together

Drawing together the latest developments about the delivery of learning within and outside of the classroom to maximise effectiveness.

What does 'good' look like?

How do you know when you are offering a high-quality service? This workshop provides an overview of the criteria by which to judge the quality of a service.

Extended services for reception and administrative staff

As they are often the first point of contact, reception staff need to understand all the extended services a school offers, and to be able to signpost parents, carers and community members to these.

Reaching out – engaging everyone in your extended services

This workshop looks at how you can target those who might get left behind, the so-called 'hard to reach', so that the service offered really does meet the needs of every child.

Developing community partnerships

Looking at the role that the community and voluntary sector can play in developing community-based services

Bespoke training for service improvement

Talk to us about training to support you in unblocking sticky situations and improving your services through action training.

Using extended services to narrow the achievement gap

Extended services have the potential to narrow the achievement gap and raise achievement for all abilities.

Governors and their responsibilities under Every Child Matters

This workshop will support governors in their strategic responsibilities for ensuring that the school meets the requirements of the Every Child Matters agenda.
